A Little More About Frontier Kentucky

I am currently searching periodicals and newspapers from frontier Kentucky, trying to find some reference to our ancestors if possible. These newspapers I have searched so far are somewhat interesting. They seem to be mainly for commercial purposes, listing products for sale, including livestock and slaves. The newspapers also reported events concerning the workings of congress and the government in the East. The ratification of the new Constitution was reported and the text of the document was printed. The Kentuke Gazette copies on microfilm in the Family History library begins in August 1787.

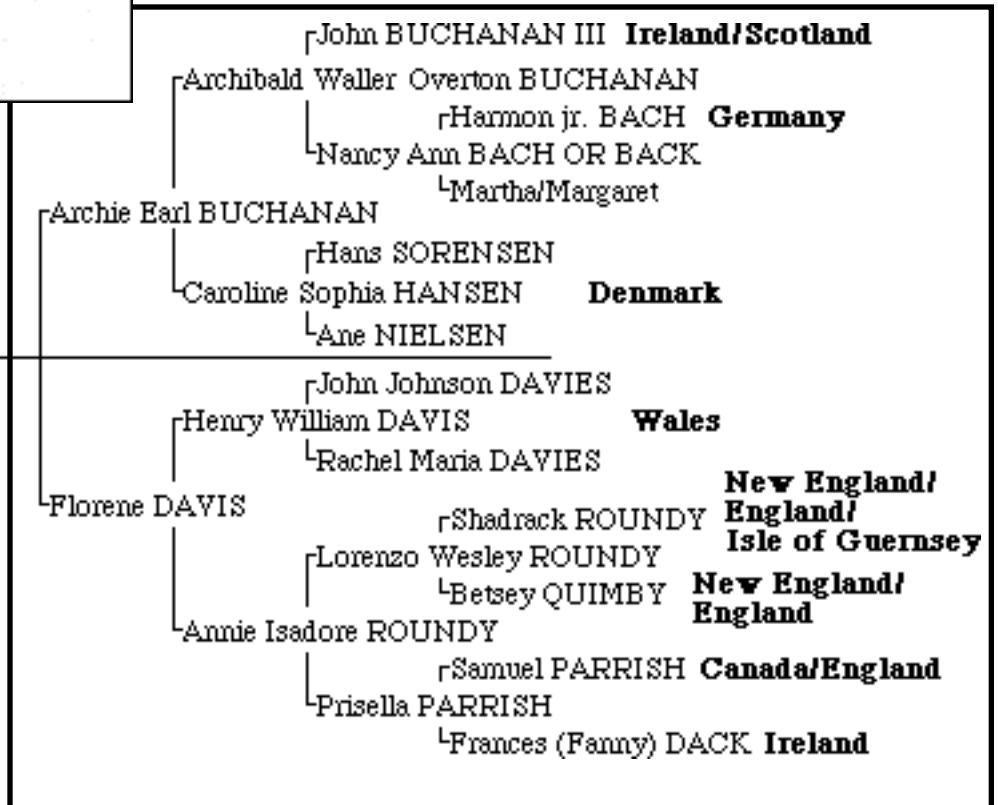

Also in the Gazette are reports of troubles with the Indians. Here is an example: "Lexington, January 23
We are just now informed, that on Saturday the 16th Inst. the Indians killed or took 2 men and a lad near the mouth of Lee's creek, on the Ohio. There were 6 whites in company, 3 of which escaped, but are not able to inform whether those missing are killed or taken, the last they saw of them the Indians had them prisoners. And about Thursday or Friday last, they killed two men some where on the waters of the hanging Fork of Dick's River, who had carried a number of horses to a Cane-break, for range." The Kentucky Gazette Vol III No. XXII, Saturday, January 23, 1790, p. 1

Some of the issues contain what are called "anecdotes". Here is one that might bring a smile: "A Recruiting officer, during the late war, had orders, not to remain more than three days in a place; he being somewhat profane, was told by a gentleman present, that for such wickedness he would certainly go to Hell - how long shall I stay there (replied the officer) to all eternity returned the other, that is wrong returned the son of Mars, for I have Gen. Washington's orders not to remain more than three days in one place." Anecdote in June 21, 1790, p 2 (VOL III NUMB XLIII)

Nancy Ann Bache was born in Lexington in February 1790. I am looking for references to the Bach or Buchanan family in that time period. So far, I have not found anything, but it will take me a while to get through this and some other periodicals of the time.

Roundy Genealogy

A lot of research has been done on the line of Shadrach Roundy. His ancestry were many generations in New England. I have only done a little work in checking out what has been done in order to see what still can be done. The main problem I see is that many of the lines end with their arrival in New England from England. Records were kept fairly well in Massachusetts and the other colonies, but tying them back to places in England is a problem. Many of the passenger lists are incomplete, especially as far back as these go. Even where there are records, they are not very specific about the origination points in England. In the following chart, the ancestry of Shadrach Roundy is shown, as far as I have (names only). Each father has a number that is twice that of his child. All are from New England (mainly Connecticut and Massachusetts) except where noted in England. The arrows indicate that the line continues back (in my records) somewhat for those in England.
